"Made In Didsbury."

The Builders Hardware Store is showing clothes baskets in their window this week, which baskets are not only made in Didsbury, but are actually made from Didsbury wood.

They are handmade baskets reinforced and much stronger than any machine-made basket and are really worth careful examination.

In times like the present, with so many unemployed men it is surprising what some people can really do to make an honest living, instead of accepting relief. These baskets are an example of this and worthy of your examination. We hope to see many more such ideas put into practice.

Mr. Spelman is only too glad to exhibit these goods to any interested parties wishing to examine them.

The proposed enlargement of the municipal areas was thoroughly discussed and the councillors expressed themselves opposing the proposed scheme. The matter will be brought before the convention of municipalities to be held in Calgary, November 16, 17 and 18. Councillors Flynn and Saunders were appointed as delegates to attend the convention.

Credit Means Debt

Much is being heard these days in criticism of Governments and banks, and proposals of many kinds are advanced having as their object the "reform" of the banking system, the "curtailment" of the powers of banks, the "socialization" and the "nationalization" of banking, money and credit; the gold standard is attacked on the one hand and defended on the other; bi-metalism is advocated; "inflation" is urged by many, while others argue that present inflation means ultimate "deflation" and future trouble. Drastic writing down of present indebtedness, even complete wiping out of debts, is demanded in some quarters, while others claim is a policy of "repudiation" and the destruction of future credit.

Present criticism of the banks rests primarily in the fact that, at the present time, the banks will not extend credit. If people today could go to their bank and borrow as readily and as largely as they could and did in 1928 and 1929, much of the criticism now heard of the banks would die out. It is because they cannot borrow, and in thousands of cases have no employment and so cannot pay, that the farmers, prices are so low that there is less than profit on their production, that people, already in debt, are bitterly critical of the banks.

Critical over what? Because the banks will not extend credit to them. In other words, the banks will not allow these people to get further into debt to them. So much is being said about banking credit, using it, expanding it, contracting it, that the average person is likely to have a confused idea as to what banking credit, or any kind of credit, actually means. And as most of us are just average persons, and particularly where financial and economic terms are concerned, it is perhaps well to reduce credit to its simplest and safest terms, and see what we make of it. Credit means debt. No matter at what angle we may view it, it means either immediately or prospectively, an obligation assumed, a debt to be paid. We borrow or buy on credit today and pledge ourselves to pay on some future day. This is true whether the transaction involves a dollar payable within a month or a million dollars payable in a score of years, and it is equally true whether it be an individual, a corporation, a municipality, a province or a nation. The principle is the same, no matter what the circumstance.

Our major difficulties today arise from the fact that there was too much credit, not too little, available to us in the past. It was easy to borrow; still easier to buy on the deferred payment, or installment plan. Everybody was doing it. The nations of the world fought a great four-years war on credit, destroying cities, industries, shipping, millions of productive human lives, blowing it all away with high explosives, and promising to pay the huge bills incurred at some future time. Farmers bought more land, more implements, combines, tractors, trucks, automobiles, radios, etc., on credit; the workmen and salaried people in the towns and cities bought houses, and furniture, and automobiles, scores of things they regarded as necessities and other scores which were luxuries, on credit. Salesmen urged the people to do these things, telling them their credit was good, And all this credit meant just one thing, it meant debt.

Governments and corporations proceeded on the same basis. Hundreds of millions of borrowed money were expended on railways, high standard highways, public buildings, and modern public services of many kinds. People demanded these things and enjoyed them. Voices raised in warning that a day of reckoning would come were disregarded, and these who gave voice to such warnings were derided as pessimists, people without vision or initiative, hopelessly non-progressive. Credit was available, so why not use it and let the future pay? And every credit used meant a debt contracted.

What was then the future is now the present, and we are called upon to pay. And that's the chief trouble today, we have got to pay, and we don't like it. Nay, more, we have awakened to the fact that it is now well nigh impossible to pay, because we used up more credit, and this created more debt, than our resources now enable us to pay.

Credit is an excellent thing, it is a thing as illusive thing, a will-o'-the-wisp to the unwary and thoughtless venturesome. But the debt created, and remember debt is always created by credit; you cannot have one without the other, is not illusive; it is a hard, concrete fact. No matter what your credit may be, it is no more, it is what you are wise, than your capacity to pay the debt which the use of that credit creates.

Present debts cannot safely be disposed of by apparently simple procedure of wiping them out by legislative action, or through the artificial process of inflation. Repudiation would be destructive of future credit, which, within reason, are essential to the carrying on of the world's business, because all credit is merely confidence, destroy confidence by acts of repudiation and you destroy credit. On the other hand, inflation beyond normal, ultimately means deflation back to normal. If the pendulum swings to the extreme right, it will have to swing just as far to the left before it gradually reaches a normal position. These are laws of nature which no legislation in the world can override.

Nor can present indebtedness be liquidated by more credit, which only means more debt, or a transfer of debt from one source to another. Debts once contracted must be honorably and honestly discharged. In some cases, in no doubt a goodly number of cases, adjustments must be made in order to prevent maximum losses by both debtor and creditor, but in the majority of cases debts ought to be paid through frugal living, practised economies, painstaking work. Having enjoyed what credit brought for us, we must now pay for that credit. Because we did not know how to use credit wisely when it was obtainable, we are now realizing what it means to pass through the slow, laborious and generally painful process of paying our debts.

Suffered A Severe Attack Of Dysentery

Mr. P. L. D. Moulford, Vernon, B.C., writes:—"Last summer I suffered from a severe attack of dysentery. I tried nearly everything on the market, without getting any relief, until a friend told me to use Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which I did, and I got immediate relief. Now I am making it a rule to always keep a bottle of it in my medicine chest. "Wild Strawberry is more relief for dysentery, colic and diarrhoea, but I always use it for the genuine "Dr. Fowler's".

An Unusual Damage Suit

Belgian Actor Claims $500 For Loss Of Beard

For the loss of his beard, which was shaved off in a French prison, a Belgian film actor, M. de Nery, is claiming $500 damages from the State.

The beard, a luxuriant growth, was of great commercial as well as aesthetic value, M. de Nery declared because it enabled him to play important parts in which a patriarchal appearance was required.

He bases his claim for compensation on the fact that while awaiting release after completing a sentence for fraud, he was sent by mistake to the penitentiary at Fresnes and subjected to the same regime as criminals who were required to be clean-shaven, instead of remaining simply under detention, as he was entitled.

Money is scarce yet she has pretty clothes

"You always look as if you had just stepped out of a fashion sheet. Yet money is none too plentiful with you. How do you do it?" The neighbors were always asking Mrs. Burnette. One day she told them. "My secret of pretty clothes is simple. When my dresses, blouses and underthings become faded with much washing, I renew their color beauty by a simple rinsing in Diamond Tints. These wonderful tints are made by the makers of Diamond Dyes, which you know are the best dyes made for dark colors. Diamond Tints are for light shades. They need no boiling and they last through repeated launderings. All you need to do is to rinse your things in Diamond Tints. You can get such lovely shades by using them. So you see," said Mrs. Burnette, "pretty clothes are as easy for you to have as for me."

SOURED THE WORLD?—THAT'S THE LIVER

Wake up your Liver Bile
—No Calomel necessary
Many people who feel sour, sluggish and tired, and who are unable to enjoy life, are suffering from a diseased liver. The liver is the largest and most important organ of the body. It is the source of bile, which is necessary for the digestion of food. If the liver is diseased, the bile is not properly secreted, and the food is not properly digested. This leads to a sour stomach, indigestion, and other ailments. The liver is also the source of many of the body's secretions, and a diseased liver can lead to a variety of other problems. It is important to keep the liver healthy, and there are many ways to do this, including eating a healthy diet, exercising, and avoiding alcohol and tobacco.

A most distressing characteristic of this debilitating disease, is the persistence with which recurring attacks come to sap away strength and leave the sufferer in a state of almost continual exhaustion. Hero Of The Sudan

One of the last surviving heroes of the British conquest of the Sudan, Sir Rudolph Slatin Pasha, 75, died in a sanatorium at Vienna, Austria. He was an Austrian by birth. When 21 he enlisted in the British army in Egypt. He served under "Chinese" Gordon and with Lord Kitchener as chief of the British Intelligence Service, and subsequently, as the British general, Sir Rudolph Slatin, he governed the Sudan.

One Way To Combat Problem Of Soil Drifting

Soil drifting is a very serious problem in many parts of Canada, and many are the ways that have been tried to combat it. Here is a new one, and one which looks fairly promising. Spread strips of fresh manure about three rods apart. Then drive the spreader the other way across the field so as to make checkerboards. Not only does this keep the soil at home, but it catches the neighbor's soil.

CANADIAN WOMEN FIND DUSTING DISTASTEFUL

Dust cloths going into discard; Unpleasant to use; a bother to Wash

APPLEFORD WONDER PAPER HAS GREAT VOICE

Of all household tasks, that of dusting is the least appealing to the majority of women.

However, this condition, like many other connected with housework, is undergoing radical change. In a great many Canadian homes the women are discarding dust cloths entirely, and are using Appleford Wonder Paper instead, because it is actually dust—on it clings—as it polishes, doing a better and much quicker job than the old dust cloth ever did.

This new, and extremely modern Wonder Paper, is made from clean rags, and soft higher pulp, treated in a scientific way with a high-grade furniture polish; and absorbs dirt instead of spreading it.

Appleford Wonder Paper comes in handy-size packets—twenty-five large sheets for twenty-five cents. You crumple a sheet into a soft wad and go over the surfaces requiring attention. Then when one side is soiled or worn, turn the Wonder Paper inside out. After you have given a quick and lasting finish to furniture and woodwork, you can still use Wonder Paper on the floors, if you wish.

And when you are through, there's no old duster to take out or wash. Throw the soiled Wonder Paper away and you've completed the most tiresome part of housework in half the time and with half the effort.

Wonder Paper is made by the makers of the famous PARA-SANI Heavy Waxed Paper in the Green Box.

Great Changes Wrought By Development Of Electricity During The Past Fifty Years

It is only fifty years since the first electric generating plant began operations. New York has been celebrating the occasion half a century ago when Edison pressed a button and a new era had begun. Even those who have lived in the transition and on through the "wiring" period are scarcely aware how much a part of life electrical power has become, how great is the change that has been wrought. It is only on those rare occasions when the power goes off that the lesson is forced home.

A modern business office takes its elevators, its telephones, telegraphs and light as a matter of course. The citizen takes electrical power, transportation and street lighting as all in the regular scheme of things. Even the average household starts the day with an electrically run coffee percolator and toaster, and as a matter of course counts on the electric iron, hot water heater, vacuum cleaner and so on, until the bed side light is snuffed off.

Electricity is taking over bigger and bigger responsibilities in industry. Last year, in the United States, industry and business consumed a total of 52,162,000,000 kilowatt hours of electrical energy for lighting and power.

It has transformed the theatre by making lighting effects, otherwise undreamed of, possible, and in all the ramifications of cinema. It has become a handmaid to therapeutic medicine, and agriculture, starting with the portable utility motor, is more and more claiming its aid. Already it is a recognized factor in the poultry business, and enough knowledge is now available to realize that it might and doubtless will be still more widely used.

There is a promise of large scale domestic heating and of cooling apparatus. Refrigeration, both for industry and home use, is now common. The day of a "private sun" with ultra violet rays guaranteed for every home is on the programme.

Ships in the air and ships at sea know electricity, from the simplest lighting devices to intricate machinery which seems almost to have occult power.

In all this development circling the globe, it is a point worthy of note that this community stands out as the electric capital of the world. Winnipeg uses more electricity per capita than any other city, and it can obtain it more cheaply for both domestic and industrial use.

In an era definitely opened as something new in history, a time when a great conquest of nature has increased man's power a thousandfold, it should mean something to Manitobans in general and to this City in particular, that it is not only among the in the vanguard but that it is leading the procession. —Winnipeg Free Press.

Having Hard Time

According to figures issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics three electric railways ceased to operate during the year. Twenty of the 52 systems operating in Canada failed to earn operating expenses, a number of them showing heavy deficits. Railroad railway systems have a hard road to travel, with steadily decreasing patronage, and the outlook for increased business anything but promising.

The Pedestrian's Paradise

Tangier, Virginia, Has No Vehicles Of Any Kind

A restless few of the 1,500 inhabitants of Tangier, Virginia, may tire of their confinement to that island town in Chesapeake Bay where there are no automobiles, no horses and no wagons, and where indeed there is but a single street, though many canals, which are crossed by bridges with gaps in the middle to permit the passage of fishing boats. The pace of community intercourse in such a place cannot be swift. No ebb and flow of catapulting vehicles, forcing pedestrians to leap out of their skins. No vile contamination of the atmosphere with carbon monoxide and the fumes of burned oil. No rash and rout of insensate mechanisms in the careless custody of every Tom, Dick, and Harry. In short, no artificial and dangerous acceleration of the pulse of life.

Outlook Improved

Railway Man Notes Better Conditions In The West

A marked improvement in the outlook of the people of the prairie provinces following the recently harvested grain crops of substantial proportions was noted by George Stephen, vice-president in charge of traffic, Canadian Pacific Railway, who returned to Montreal from an extending trip through the west.

A very much smaller section of the three prairie provinces was this year affected by drought, and in this respect no grain at all was harvested last year there was this year some reward, even if of modest proportions in certain districts, for grain growers to gather, he said. Relief to be supplied by the government of Saskatchewan this year would be small compared with that necessary during the past two seasons, he said.

Automobiles On Farms

Seventy-One Per Cent. Of Passenger Cars In Saskatchewan In Rural Areas

No less than 71 per cent. of the passenger automobile in Saskatchewan in 1931 were on farms; 54 per cent. in Prince Edward Island; 54 per cent. in Alberta; 49 per cent. in Manitoba, and only 33 per cent. in British Columbia, and 18 per cent. in Quebec. Although Ontario had the greatest number of passenger automobiles on farms and the greatest number per farm of all the provinces the percentage on farms of total registrations within the province was only 25.7 per cent.

Grading Is Desirable

Establishment Of Grades Desirable In Co-Operative Marketing

The current issue of the "Economic Annalist," official organ of the Federal Agricultural Economics Branch, is the source of the following statement:

"The establishment and maintenance of grades is particularly desirable in the case of co-operative marketing. The grower of a good commodity should receive a premium for the extra care and efficiency involved in producing a superior product.

Canadian farmers or business men handling farm products who are looking for new markets must bear in mind that their products will meet competition from other areas and per chance other countries. It will pay to study trade requirements and competitive practices and to build a sales policy around a product sold on the basis of standardized grades."

Making Leather At Home

New Methods Make Home Tanning Now Fairly Easy

In these days when advantage has to be taken of every possible economy interest is revived in the home tanning of leather. A number of inquiries as to how this can be done have been received by the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, and to meet the need a special circular has been prepared. This deals with the several processes of fleshing, liming, debalting, tanning, testing, softening and finishing leathers and hides of different kinds. While the old tanning bark method involved a long period of time and a lot of work many new methods make the home tanning of leather fairly easy.

Wild Amusement

A commercial traveler, having missed his connection, found himself with two hours to spend in a small village. He approached an ancient porter.

"Got a picture house here?" he asked.

"No."

"A billiard hall or library?"

"No."

"Well, how on earth do you amuse yourselves?"

"We goes down to the store of an evening. They've just got a new baconciskin."

When the population of Canada was officially counted last year records were also taken of the number of live stock of different kinds in the Dominion, and these records are now available. They show that there are 3,115,582 horses. The horse is therefore still far from extinct, notwithstanding the rivalry of the automobile and the truck. The average number of horses per farm reported is 5.3 compared with 5.7 in 1921. Much the largest number of horses is in the province of Saskatchewan which almost reaches the million mark. Alberta is second with 732,000, and Ontario third with 577,000.

Milch cows on Canadian farms number 3,510,000 as against 3,228,600 in 1921, an increase of 8.72 per cent. Ontario has the largest cow population with 1,114,000, but British Columbia shows the most rapid increase, the number of milch cows in that province having increased by more than 53 per cent. in the last ten years. The average number of milch cows per farm is now 6.3 per cent. compared with 5.4 per cent. at the previous census. It is noteworthy that the greatest actual increase in cows has been in the Prairie Provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Other cattle total 1,408,000, which is a falling off of 12½ per cent. since 1921. The only provinces which show an increase are Quebec and British Columbia, although the largest number of cattle are in Ontario.

Sheep are raised on 130,000 farms and the total number is 3,622,000, an increase of 13.18 per cent. in ten years. The largest sheep population is in Ontario, but the most rapid increase in numbers is in British Columbia. The number of swine is 4,067,000, an increase of 40 per cent. since the last census. The most rapid increase has been in Alberta, although the largest number are in Ontario, with 1,400,000, and Saskatchewan third. The poultry population totals over 65,000,000 and in the last ten years has increased by 51.62 per cent. The largest number of poultry are in Ontario but the most rapid increase is in British Columbia.

Taster For Produce Firm

Cleveland Man Has Held Job For Forty-Five Years

It's lucky Edward Price likes olives, for he earns his living by eating them. For 45 years he has lived in a world of olives. Amid long rows of casks and barrels, stacked one atop another, Price goes about his work of tasting and smelling every consignment of olives to a produce firm at Cleveland, Ohio.

Recently a shipment of seven carloads of olives from Seville, Spain, augmented the stock of the company to the largest in its history. And Price must taste an olive from each container.

The seventy-one-year-old taster eats no breakfast so that his sense of taste may always be on edge for his daily task. At noon he eats but lightly of soup and rice pudding.

"I do my heavy eating at the evening meal," he smiled. "Healthy? Say I'm as healthy at 71 as I ever was. I like to eat. Besides olives, I must sample preserves, mustard, peanut butter and extracts but that doesn't spoil my appetite for supper."

Alberta Production Season.

Review of Conditions in the Province
At Close of 1932 Crop Season.

The Province of Alberta has come to the close of another production season with the knowledge that it has produced one of the largest wheat crops in its history, and of generally high quality, but that the extremely low prices will result in disappoint-ingly small returns for the farmers.
There are mitigating features in the crop situation, however, which give ground for some satisfaction and will materially contribute to the ability of the farming population to carry on through the coming winter.
One of these is the abundant supply
of feed which has been produced.

will give a substantial cash return to the growers.

A general review of conditions in the province will be interesting at this time.

Threshing of the wheat crop is practically concluded, with the exception of an area between Red Deer and High River, where considerable delay has been experienced through rain and snowstorms. These have not only delayed operations, but have caused further deterioration in grade to some extent. In this area about 40 per cent of the threshing remains to be done.

Generally speaking, the wheat crop is good in both yield and grade.
The provincial dept. of agriculture has reported that the average yield made on Sept. 16, of an average 44.4 bushels per acre, with a total of 1,242,000 bushels. The anticipation at the beginning of July was for a very much larger yield, but the hot dry spell of the middle of July caused a greater reduction in yield than was at first estimated. The bulk of the grain is grading No. 1 and No. 2 Northern, with more going into the higher grade of No. 1 hard than has been usual. In the areas where rain and snow have interrupted the threshing, however, some of the wheat will fall into the lower grades.

The situation in coarse grains and fodder is quite satisfactory, assuring an abundance of winter feed for the livestock. The acreage of alfalfa, clover and grasses is increasing and the heavy yields obtained this year will tend further to increase the acreage devoted to these valuable crops.

The condition of all livestock in the province is good, and with an abundance of feed available should carry through the winter in excellent shape. The low level of the wheat prices has stimulated interest in livestock as never before, and while prices are far from satisfactory, returns are better than those received for grain.

Indications are that dairy production in the province will be somewhat lower than last season. This year's prices for dairy products have been the lowest for many years, but a very gratifying increase in the price paid for butterfat took place in August and the indications are that the better prices will be sustained. Production for the first eight months in the year for creamery butter was 45,953,000-lbs., as compared with

17,180,000-lbs. for the same period in 1931.

Alberta has earned an enviable reputation for the quality of its poultry, particularly in the matter of turkeys, and is in fact one of the leading provinces in Canada with respect to turkey production. The industry in general has been fostered by a steady policy of flock improvement by the provincial department of agriculture in co-operation with the federal department and university and in spite of low price levels the industry is in a fairly good state.
There has been some improvement
recently in prices.

Though prices in the swine industry are also lower than for many years, the past season has proved one of the heaviest in the history of Alberta in the number of hogs exported. There has also been a percentage of the selects in the total marketings during the past season
has been approximately 8 per cent, which is considerably higher than
was the case a few years ago.

The very low price levels in all agricultural products and consequent depletion of farm revenue has led to efforts on the part of farmers everywhere to economize to the last degree possible. The present year's crop was grown and harvested at probably a lower cost than has been the case in any previous year. There is also a very noticeable tendency towards a reversion to old-time methods of bartering of products has become quite extensive and there is an effort to utilize all products of the farm to meet every home need. Practices such as the carding of wool for quilts, and the home-canning of vegetables, meats and locally-grown fruits and the drying of vegetables are common among many farmers.

Mountain View Notes

Mr. E. Barnes was a Calgary visitor on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Atkinson and Miss Brown spent Sunday at Nisbet.

Threshing machines are hushed again, owing to early snowstorms,
and many farmers are short of feed
for their stock.

Several pupils and their teacher were busy Saturday afternoon and decorated Mona school for a party on Halloween. Black cats, paper hats, owls, goodies, etc. made one long to be of school age again. Miss Snyder also made elaborate preparations for a similar party at Neapolis.
We hope no teacher lost her way as was the case last year, when she took a short cut home and got lost in the dark. She was gallantly rescued, however, and taken safely home.

To Aid Disabled Ex-Service Men

If the material steps taken by the organized ex-service men of Canada during the past ten years are worthy of commendation, primarily must come approval of the efforts exerted
on behalf of ex-service men handicapped by war disability, particularly those who in the ordinary avenues of endeavor are unemployable.

What has been achieved in that respect is very well known in every part of Canada.

To aid these men, who gave that which they cannot recover, Veterans Shops were established by the Dept.
of Pensions and National Health.

In these shops wreaths and poppies
to be used for Remembrance Day are made, and by arrangement with the Dept. of Pensions and National Health these wreaths and poppies
are distributed throughout Canada
by the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League. Reflect that these men were otherwise unemployable and reflect also that knowledge they could be and were thus employed was chief among the compensations of those striving for the betterment of those who gave so generously in their Country's cause,
in humanity's cause.

It should be remembered that if wages for work done was not received by these men, as they are incapable of doing any other kind of work and are incapacitated for other work, they would have to accept local relief in each instance.

John S. Rennie,

The local Canadian Legion will have a supply of Veterans Poppies
and they will be on sale Saturday,

THE HOUSE OF DREAMS-COME-TRUE

— BY —
MARGARET FIEDLER

Author of
"The Splendid Folly," "The Hermit
Of Far End,"
Hodder & Stoughton, Ltd., London.

Jean's thoughts lashed her. Her shoulders bent and covered a little as though beneath a physical blow.

There had been a time—oh! very long ago, it seemed, before Destiny had come with her snufflers and quenched the twin flames of love and happiness—a time when dainty, as in some exquisite dream, she had heard the sound of little voices, felt the helpless touch of tiny hands, perhaps Nests, too, had heard those voices, felt those clinging hands, while her soul quickened to the vision of a future which might hold some deeper meaning, some more sacred trust and purpose, than her empty wayward past.

And she, Jean, had stood between Nests and the fulfilment of that dream, forever bidding her entrance to her woman's kingdom.

She saw it all now with a terrible clarity of vision, understood to the full the two alternatives which faced her—to go with Blaise, as he implored, or to send him—her man, the man she loved—back to Nests. There was no longer any middle course.

A voice sounded in her ears.

"No true happiness ever came of running away from duty. And if ever I'm up against such a thing—a choice like this—hope to God I'd be able to hang on to my straight, even if it half-killed me to do it!"

The words sounded so clear and distinct that Jean half-raised her head to see who spoke them. And then, in an overwhelming rush of memory, she recognized that it was no actual voice she heard but the mental echo of her own words to Nick—to Nick at the time when he had been passing through a like fire of fierce temptation.

How easily, in her young, untried ignorance, the words had fallen from her lips as she had urged Nick to renounce his fated resolve! Such eminently wise and excellent counsel! And how little—how crassly little had she realized at the time the huge demand that she was making!

She had spoken as though it were comparatively easy to reject the wrong and choose the right—to follow the stern and narrow path of Duty, through the mists and utter darkness that enshrouded it, up to those shining heights which lie beyond human sight—the outposts of Eternal Heaven itself.

Easy! . . . Oh, God! . . . When at last Jean uncovered her face and lifted it to meet the set gaze of the man beside her, it was wan and ravaged—the face of one who has come through some fierce purgatory of torment.

"Well?" he demanded, his voice roughened because he found himself unable to steady it with that sternal and altered face upturned to his. "Well? Are you going to send me back to Nests?"

She did not answer his question. Instead, she put another.

"Do you think she—loves you?"

"Nests? Yes. As far as her sort can love, I believe she does."

Jean nodded, as though it were the answer she had expected.

"Blaise . . . I'm going to send you back to her. I'm sure now. I know. It's the only thing we can do . . . We must say goodbye—altogether—never see each other again."

"Never?" The word came draggingly.

"Never. It—it would be too hard for us, Blaise, to see each other."

"Yes," he answered slowly. "It would be too hard."

They were both silent. The minutes ticked away unregarded. Time had ceased to count. This farewell was till the end of time.

"Blaise . . . All the resonance had gone out of her voice. It sounded flat and tired. "You—you will go back to her?"

"Yes, I will go back."

She stretched out her hands flutteringly.

"Then go . . . go soon, Blaise! —I can't bear very much more."

He opened his arms, then, and she went to him, and for a space they clung together in silence. For the last time he set his lips to hers, held her once more against his heart. Then slowly they drew apart, stricken eyes gazing lingeringly into other eyes as striking, and presently the closing of the terrace door told her that he had gone, and that she must turn her feet to the solitary path of those who have said farewell to love.

Henceforth, she would be alone—living or dying, quite alone.

It was long past midnight when Claire returned from the Dover House.

She found Jean sitting beside the grey embers of a burnt-out fire, her hands lying folded upon her knee, her eyes staring stonily in front of her in a fixed, unseeing gaze.

Claire called to her softly, as when one wakes a sleeper.

"Jean!"

Jean turned her head.

"So you have got back?" she said dully. She stood up stiffly, as though her limbs were cramped. "Claire, I am going away—right away from here—to Bernfels."

"Why?" asked Claire.

She waited tensely for the answer. "Blaise has been here. He asked me to go away with him. I've sent him back to Nests."

The short, stilted sentences fell mechanically from her lips. She spoke exactly like a child repeating a lesson learned by rote.

Claire's eyes grew very pitiful.

"And must you go to Bernfels alone?" she asked quietly. "Won't you take me with you?"

"Will you come?"—incredulously.

"Of course I'll come. I shouldn't dream of letting you go by yourself."

And then, all at once, Jean's tired body, exhausted by the soul's long conflict, gave way, and she slipped to the ground in a dead faint.

CHAPTER XXXV. The Eve of Departure

A week later Jean sat at the foot of the stairs and surveyed with faint amusement the motley collection of trunks and suit-cases which thronged the hall.

She was still looking pale and worn, strung up to face her self-imposed exile from the country which now held everything that was dear to her, but no enormity of sorrow would ever blind Jean for long to the whimsical aspect that attends so many of the little things of life.

"What a lot of useless lumber we women carry about with us where we go!" she commented. "Five—six—seven packages to supply the needs of two solitary females—and Heaven only knows how many brown paper parcels will be required at the last moment for all the things we shall find we have forgotten when the time actually comes to start."

Claire standing on the flight of stairs above and viewing the assemblage in the hall from over the top of the banister rail, giggled helplessly.

"Yes, they do look a lot," she admitted. "However"—hopefully—"there'll be plenty of room for them all when we actually get to Bernfels."

"Oh, plenty," agreed Jean. "But we must go to convey them half across Europe first—two lone women and one miserable maid who will probably become train-sickness and homesickness to an extent that will totally incapacitate her for the performance of her duties."

At this moment the front-door bell clanged violently through the house, as though pulled by someone in a tremendous hurry. Claire hastily withdrew her head from over the banister rail and disappeared upstairs, while Jean relinquished the accommodation offered by the bottom-most step and sought refuge in the nearest of the sitting-rooms, closing the door stealthily behind her.

A moment later Tucker, who had caught sight of her hurriedly retreating figure, reopened it and announced imperturbably:

"Mr. Burke."

Jean greeted him with surprise, but without any feeling of embarrassment. So much had happened since the day she had eluded him on the Moor, events of such intimate and tragic import had swept her path, that the unexpected meeting failed to rouse any feeling either of anger or dislike. Burke, and everything connected with him, belonged to another period of her existence altogether—to that glorious care-free time when it had seemed as though life were a deep, inexhaustible well bubbling over with wonderful possibilities. Burke was merely a ghost—a revenant from that far distant epoch.

"I'm in time, then?" he said, when he had shaken hands.

"In time? In time for what?"

"In time to see you before you go."

"Oh, yes," Jean spoke lightly. "You're in time for that. But who told you I was going away? I didn't know you were in England, even."

"I came back a fortnight ago—to London. Judith wired me from home that you were leaving Coombe Ravine."

"I don't see the necessity for her wiring you," remarked Jean a little coldly. "There was no need for you to see me."

"There was—every need."

She glanced at him keenly, a new note in his voice, an unexpected gravity and restraint.

"Every need," he repeated. He paused, then went on quickly, with a nervousness that was foreign to him.

"Jean, I know everything that has happened—that your engagement to Tormarin is at an end—and I have come to ask you if you will be my wife. No—hear me out!—as she would have interrupted him. "I'm not asking you now—as I did before. If you will marry me, I swear I will ask for nothing that you are not willing to give. I'm making no demands. I've learned now—with a faint, wry smile—that you cannot force love. It can only be given. And I want nothing but just the right to take care of you, to shield you—to keep the sharp corners of life away from you." Then, as he read her incredulous face, he went on gravely: "If I had wanted more than that, Jean, if I had not learned something—just from loving you, I should not have waited until now. I should have come at once—as soon as I learned from Madame de Varigny that Tormarin's wife was still alive."

She looked at him curiously.

"Why didn't you come then, Geoffrey? I sometimes wondered—your being well"—with a faint smile—"Because, of course, I knew why you had rushed off to France. Madame de Varigny explained that."
